Forecast For East Midlands
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 21 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Rain, sleet and hill snow easing. Sunny spells follow. Cold.

Today:
A cold start with outbreaks of rain, sleet and hill snow gradually fading. Brighter, and increasingly sunny spells are then expected, with all parts likely dry by the end of the day. Brisk winds gradually easing later. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Tonight:
Clear spells and easing winds will bring a cold but mostly dry night. Perhaps the odd wintry shower moving into the Pennines. Icy patches are possible, with frost also likely. Minimum temperature -2 deg C (28 deg F).

Friday:
A largely fine but cold January day. Sunny spells are likely for most, although further wintry showers could move into the far northwestern hills. Maximum temperature 6 deg C (43 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Cold, often sunny weekend, but also isolated wintry showers. Some snow possible, but low confidence. Clear spells overnight, with widespread frost and icy stretches. Fine, dry but cold Monday.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.